

"PASS MY BILL OR I'LL VETO APPROPRIATIONS!" -- BLAINE

FINANCE BODY BREAKS UP IN ROW OVER BILL

One Solon In Tears As Committee Reconsiders Blaine Tax Measure

By Associated Press
Madison—The joint committee on finance which met Thursday afternoon to act again of Governor Blaine's general income tax bill broke up in a row late Thursday with at least one member in tears and without having taken any stand on the measure. Another meeting is to be held at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon when it is planned to dispose of the administration tax proposal.

Governor Blaine is understood to have a communication which he will address to the committee when it meets. It will be a last minute effort, legislators say, to give him an edge in the balloting on his bill.

USING "PRESSURE"
After the measure was referred back to the committee at Wednesday night's session it appeared that opponents of the proposal would have a two vote edge returning a report of 8 to 6 against the bill. Since then Assemblyman Summerville has been taken seriously ill and is in a hospital. Pressure which members say is "unusual," is being brought to bear on Assemblyman Hebe, the other member who has opposed the bill. He spent considerable time Thursday in the governor's office.

When the governor's bill came before the committee Thursday, the most stormy session in years commenced. The measure which had been reported for passage by a 6 to 3 vote was back again faced with an adverse vote of 7 to 8.

Senator Henry Huber, chairman at once questioned a statement by Senator Anton Kuckuck that the measure had been rushed through and that committee members had to go to work in a hurry. Senator C. B. Casperson joined Senator Huber in a renunciation that was later described as "dramatic." Both members included Assemblyman A. E. Matheson in their remarks.

ENGAGE IN VERBAL COMBAT
Kuckuck replied to his statement was based upon what three members of the committee told him and did not recede from his position. Loud shouting and pounding on the table was heard by persons outside as some of the members engaged in their verbal combat.

Throughout the whole session the conversation concerned personalities and did not include a discussion of the merits of the bill, which will come in for discussion at 3 o'clock Friday.

Unprecedented maneuvers are being made by members in an effort to get favorable action on the bill both in committee and on the floor.

SENATE VOTES DOWN RUM REFERENDUM

By Associated Press
Madison—The Wisconsin senate Thursday night voted against a referendum of the people on the prohibition question, both the wet and drys joining to bring its defeat.

The question was raised by the Schumann bill, calling for a vote on the proposed repeal of the Eighteenth amendment and for modification of the Volstead act.

Senator Gettelman and Senator White, both wets, declared that nothing could be gained by the proposed vote. Gettelman said that people knew the state was wet now.

LOCATE KIDNAPED LAD IN COTTAGE IN WOODS

By Associated Press
Watertown, N. Y.—Vernor Alexander, 6, of Schenectady, who was kidnapped from his home Monday evening by his mother, was located by the police Saturday morning. The boy, for whom appeal has been made by radio and newspaper through the country and Canada, was found Thursday in a small cottage at Stony Point, deep in the woods along Indian river, three miles south of Watertown.

With him was Mrs. H. E. Grinnell, Alexandria Bay, who held by the sheriff for questioning said two strange men had employed her to care for the boy in the Indian river camp until they could move their families there Saturday morning. The boy, a lively, healthy child, was found by a party of men who were hunting for him. The men are believed to be Stanley Crandall of Rochester, formerly of Watertown and Harry Fairbanks of Alexandria Bay. Both are married and for some time have been living at Alexandria Bay, where the police say, they have engaged in bootlegging.

Pair Refuses To Abandon Sinking Bark

By Associated Press
Madison—The tale of the wreck of the British bark, Amy Turner, whose captain and his wife stood hand in hand on the poop deck as the vessel went down in a raging typhoon off the Island of Guam, March 27, was brought here Thursday by four survivors of the disaster which claimed the lives of nine others.

Charles West, seaman of Melbourne, Australia, told the story.

The Amy Turner from New Castle, Australia, with coal, run into the storm March 23, for more than three days the bark fought the gale, on the morning of the 27th the crew decided to abandon the water logged ship.

Two boats were prepared for launching and the eleven men of the crew urged the captain and his wife to join them in what they believed to be the only means of escape from certain death. But Neil Nelson, the ship's master, and his spouse refused to leave the Amy Turner.

Then the crew launched the two boats, West and two others in one, the remaining eight of the crew in the other. As they pulled away from the side of the bark they saw the captain and Mrs. Nelson, standing hand in hand on the poop deck until the craft took her last plunge beneath the mountainous waves.

The larger boat capsized and seven of her occupants were drowned, but the eighth, Frank Lyndholm, swam to the side of West's boat and was hauled aboard.

Makes Fondy Believe He's Local Speed Cop

The city of Fond du Lac has made the Appleton police department a present of a new motorcycle officer, but the department for reasons of its own, has refused to accept the gift. Likewise the department disclaims knowledge of any officer, who though "a stickler for proprieties in his own town," demands special privileges in others.

Milwaukee and Fond du Lac newspapers Thursday and Friday carried the news that V. Foster an "Appleton speed cop" forgot to keep his eye on the indicator and found himself speeding at the rate of 32 miles an hour directly into the arms of a Fond du Lac motorcop, who was responsible for Foster's ending in minus $10 and costs.

When informed of the fact Friday morning, Chief George T. Prim looked over his roster and found no one that could answer to the roll call as V. Foster. The city directory also gave no information of a V. Foster. The only V. Foster in the community was declared to be Vincent Foster, keeper of a roadhouse on the Calumet-line, Darby-rd, and the nearest he comes to being an Appleton motorcycle officer is being constable of the town of Buchanan.

The following was printed by Milwaukee and Fond du Lac newspapers: "The speed cop it a stickler for the proprieties in his own home town, but when it comes to somebody else's town, that is something else again."

"V. Foster is a motorcycle officer in Appleton and Appletonian motorists are duly careful when he looms in the offing. But V. Foster wasn't half so careful last night as he expects his constituents' at home to be."

"His speedometer was touching the 32-mile mark when Motorcycle Officer Turner overhauled him on Main-st. Foster paid $10 and costs with more or less grace this morning."

ARMY MEN HOP OVER U. S. IN 26 HOURS

By Associated Press
San Diego, Calif. — Lieutenants Oakley Kelly and John A. MacReady, United States army aviators, completed on Thursday the first nonstop flight from New York to San Diego. Their time was 26 hours, 40 minutes and 48.25 seconds. They used an army transport monoplane. The flight began on Wednesday at 12:36:53 p. m., eastern standard time.

The transcontinental airmen received a warm greeting when they were sighted over the city a few minutes before they landed at Rockwell field. Aircraft from Rockwell field and naval planes from North Island escorted the two lieutenants to the landing field. Whistles of factories and from welcome in the harbor joined in welcome. Both aviators were in good physical condition when they landed.

The historic flight of the mighty monoplane T-2 began at Hempstead, N. Y., with Kelly at the wheel. The T-2 cleared the hangars at the end of the flying field by inches, nosed up for elevation and turned its blunt nose toward Rockwell field, its goal.

Many assemblymen took the floor during the hour and a half debate on the bill and charges of political maneuvering were numerous.

The assembly finally passed, 45 to 37, and sent to the senate the Graham bill legalizing Sunday dancing, shows, sports and public diversions. Assemblyman Perry of Milwaukee, Matheson of Janesville, strongly opposed the bill the former declaring it was backed by the moving picture interests and the latter holding that it was poorly drawn in that it did not apply to persons furnishing the amusement.

PRISONER LOSES GUARD; WON'T LET HIM IN JAIL

Leavenworth, Kan.—To be refused admittance to the federal penitentiary to which he had been sentenced was the unique experience of T. W. Harmon, convicted recently in Oklahoma for violating federal laws, when he arrived at the prison here.

But Harmon won't have to wait long, authorities say. As soon as Harmon's guard, who became lost on the trip to Leavenworth, arrives, the prison gates will be opened and Harmon will be welcome to enter. Harmon told officers that his guard stepped off the train at Chanute, Kan., and the train pulled out before he got back.

In the meantime, Harmon is a guest at a local hotel.

LITTLE ALARM ABOUT BRITISH 'BOSSING' SEAS

"Command Of Seas" Talk By English Admiralty Regarded Only As "Rhetorical"

By DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright 1923 by the Post, Pub. Co., Washington—Secretary Hughes has let it be known that he is not particularly disturbed over the phrase "command of the seas" as used by the first lord of the British admiralty in the latter's plea to parliament for a $55,000,000 appropriation to fortify the British naval base at Singapore.

Mr. Hughes is inclined to regard the observation made in the British parliament a couple days ago as a rhetorical expression. Just what is meant by "command of the seas" might be as much a subject of controversy as its opposite, "freedom of the seas," but the essential point which the American government bears in mind is that the nation of naval strength between the United States and Great Britain was defined both in spirit and in letter by the Washington armament treaty of a year ago in which the two countries were placed on an equality of 5-5-3 with Japan, represented by the third figure in the ratio.

MATTER OF DISPUTE
The United States and Great Britain were to be equal in naval forces—that was clear enough—but it will always be a matter of controversy among naval men as to whether the British or the American navy is superior simply because one navy will boast of a better training and experience and another will boast of a better record of gun fire. It was to be expected that British naval men would argue constantly for greater appropriations so as to maintain a superiority over all other navies even though in ships and materials the two navies would be closely limited. The recent discussion of the elevation of guns is a pertinent case of natural rivalry which both countries will have to watch but it is evident from the tone of official comments today that rhetorical expressions or boasts about "command of the seas" will not be taken seriously.

THE UPSHOT OF THE INCIDENT PROBABLY will be no exchange of notes between the two governments but unquestionably Sir Auckland Geddes, the British ambassador, who is a good reporter of things going on in America, will write a long letter describing the effect on American opinion of the "command of the seas" speech of the first lord of the admiralty and the phrase will take its place along with many others in speeches that have been called "indiscreet" and have never been repeated in the interest of good feeling between the two peoples.

By Associated Press
Hongkong—After a fluctuating battle along the North river, lasting many days and entailing heavy casualties, Sun Yet Sen, the Canton leader of the southern constitutionalist troops, has gained what is considered here a decisive victory of Kwangsi army that was menacing Canton.

The main battle began Sunday when the Sun Yet Sen forces made a general attack on the enemy, who occupied strong positions on a hill along the Canton Hankow railway. The turning point of the battle came Monday, according to the reports received here. The constitutionalists, by a wide defeat, succeeded in striking at the enemy rear and the Kwangsi soldiers, demoralized when they found themselves outflanked by a considerable force, retreated precipitately toward the border of Kwangsi province.

Trial Of Ten Officials Of Company Begins At Werden

By Associated Press
Werden, Renish Prussia—Ten officials of the Krupp works at Essen, charged with inciting their workmen to riot against the French forces of occupation were put on trial here Friday before a French court martial.

Fourteen workmen lost their lives, nine being killed outright and 30 were wounded in the riot which occurred on March 31 when a detachment of French troops visited the Krupp works to requisition automobiles. Dr. Gustav Krupp Von Bohlen Halbach, husband of Bertha Krupp and president of the Krupp company was questioned for an hour and a half by Colonel Perrot, the presiding officer, as to the facts of the disorders.

Dr. Krupp Von Bohlen, who is tall and bald headed, stood at attention during his entire examination, scarcely glancing at the members of the court. He answered the questions of the interpreter who translated the French questions into German.

"Why didn't you give an order to stop the blowing of the sirens during the two hours in which was being sounded?" Colonel Perrot asked.

"It was not the policy of the directors to interfere in such affairs, which are immediate in the hands of the men themselves," he replied.

GOVERNOR IN FINAL STAND ON TAX ISSUE

Declares Own Measure Is Only One Fulfilling Progressive Pledge

Madison—Governor Blaine served notice on the joint finance committee Friday that unless the legislature passed his general income tax bill, the income appropriations for which mill taxes are the source of revenue, will face an executive veto.

This move of the governor is accepted as a final coup in an effort to force a favorable report of the finance committee and enactment of his proposed tax law.

SET SELF AS LEADER
In his letter, addressed to Senator Henry A. Huber, chairman of the finance committee, Governor Blaine sets himself up as the leader of the Progressive Republicans, outlines the pledge he made to the people at the last election for a change in tax laws, expresses disapproval of surtaxes on incomes and then sets out his intention to veto appropriation bills unless his tax plan is accepted.

"Along these lines and within the constitutional power the contest will be made," he concludes in his letter. After quoting the Republican platform pledge on taxation, Governor Blaine said that "that pledge has been written into a specific bill. So far as it is within my power, it is my duty to urge fulfillment of that pledge," he continued. "Having been commissioned by over 367,000 voters I have no right to surrender that duty and responsibility. I have no intention to surrender that duty and responsibility."

APPEALS TO SOCIALISTS

Madison—Governor Blaine's letter to the finance committee, which came out Friday afternoon in a last effort to line up votes for his tax bill. The Socialists expect that he will play every card for their three senate ballots which are the controlling factor in the upper house division of tax legislation. The governor is using every power within the scope of his office to force favorable action on the measure he drafted and is sponsoring. His threatened veto of appropriations bills unless the bill is passed is said in the legislature to be almost unprecedented.

Blaine said that "that pledge has been written into a specific bill. So far as it is within my power, it is my duty to urge fulfillment of that pledge," he continued. "Having been commissioned by over 367,000 voters I have no right to surrender that duty and responsibility. I have no intention to surrender that duty and responsibility."

MUST BE SUSTAINED, HOWEVER
"My duty and obligation toward the people of this state is to withhold my approval of any bill making an appropriation to meet which a mill tax is or may be the source of revenue. To that extent the governor has the power to carry out, in part the covenant with the people. If one third of the members of each house shall agree to sustain the disapproval of the executive."

"Having fulfilled my obligations in so far as it has been possible I shall continue to present the facts and evidence to the people. I shall endeavor to persuade those having the responsibility, that a party pledge is more than a scrap of paper to be tossed aside after election."

To emphasize what his warning means, the governor said "that the mill taxes on personal and real property for the next year and the next year amount to $2,500,000 annually, and appropriation bills for these two institutions carry large additional amounts."

Governor Blaine expressed opposition to surtaxes on incomes, and that it be the duty of the legislature to see after the vote on his bill Friday afternoon.

ANOTHER WILD ONE

Perhaps no legislature ever met in any state where sinister influences of one sort or another have not attempted to get legislation for wholly selfish purposes and regardless of the fact that the public welfare would be injured. We have in mind now a group of men in which is included slyster lawyers, ambulance chasers, fixers, as well as others who make a living and sometimes large profits out of fomenting litigation and principally the form of litigation that arises out of personal injuries.

These men apparently recognize that the legislature of Wisconsin may be worked by them and to such an extent that they have boldly introduced what is known as House Bill No. 534 which provides, among other things, that in all civil actions in which the defendant has liability insurance, evidence of the fact of such insurance may be proven in the case in the same manner as any other material issue.

To the unwary this seems like an innocent measure. In fact it is perhaps as vicious a bill as has been introduced even in the legislature of Wisconsin. The bold purpose of this bill may be clearly seen from the following example: Jones is injured by Smith's automobile; the accident was caused entirely by the carelessness of Jones and Smith is not at all at fault. But Smith carries liability insurance which is merely insurance to the effect that if he, Smith, is at fault in any injury and held liable in damages, the insurance company will pay the amount of damages against him, usually limited to the sum of $1,000, $2,000 or $5,000. The ambulance chasers who thrive off such litigation are very well aware of the fact that the usual juries consist of pretty practical men who may not easily be hoodwinked by the claim of Jones for damages. If, therefore, they may prove in the case that Smith has insurance, they will be enabled to lead the attention of the jury away from the merits of the case and give the impression that the contest is between Jones and an insurance company, that the insurance company, being a corporation should of course be mulcted of damages, and therefore succeed in many cases where otherwise they would fail.

A person need not be familiar with laws or courts to clearly understand that whether or not Smith has liability insurance has had nothing to do with the cause of the injuries to Jones. The whole question that should be tried in such a lawsuit, the fair question, the honest question, is whether or not Smith was at fault or Jones.

In other words, the elements that are now loose in this state are not content with anything short of a corruption of the very fountain of justice itself, the courts and our jury system. An intelligent legislature would not long hesitate in voting down this measure which will gain nothing for anyone excepting that noxious class which lives off the misfortunes of others. The legislature of Wisconsin pretends that it is committed to the passage of legislation for the general benefit of the people of the state and particularly for the benefit of farmers and workers. If such be the fact the legislature should see that the enactment into law of such a measure must necessarily result in this: a gain to no honest litigant although it will be a gain to ambulance chasers; a loss to liability insurance companies which must be made up by a raising by the companies of their premiums, and as nearly all the farmers and working men in the state own automobiles, they must pay, or at least help to pay the increased premiums. The net result will be that the people of the state including working men and farmers will pay a vast sum to ambulance chasers.

While we are not conscious of any act of the present legislature of Wisconsin which indicates a very high degree of intelligence at Madison, we must, until we see the contrary, doubt that our legislators are so simple-minded or so gullible as to think that this proposed legislation is going to hurt the insurance companies or to believe the ambulance chasers and their representatives when they so assert. Surely there should be enough intelligence in the legislature to see through this plain flim-flam game and to protect the owners of 400,000 motor vehicles in the state from an increase in insurance premiums which must eventually go to about as undeserving an element in the state as comes to mind. Indeed, we are convinced that such legislation would be of direct financial benefit to the insurance companies. It will provide a genuine reason for the raising of the premiums on liability insurance and all human experience has been to the effect that when a genuine reason is provided for the raising of rates or the price of commodities, the raise is always more than enough to cover the new element of cost; in other words, the insurance companies would adopt rates to make them perfectly safe from the new element of risk and to cover all possible loss that may arise. This can never be done accurately. Therefore, it must be done in large enough measure to put the insurance companies on the safe side which will in fact mean that they will profit by legislation. Net result: profit by insurance companies, profit by ambulance chasers, loss to automobile owners and the defeat of justice.

A LITTLE ADVICE

From the spring of 1919 until the fall of 1920 the United States went through a period of apparently great prosperity. Wages were very high, so were materials and produce. The modes and manners of life and living became very extravagant. Luxuries were purchased by nearly everyone with seeming indifference as to how they were to be paid for. Only a few of the wiser ones put money in their savings accounts at the banks. Almost over night, industrial stagnation was upon us. The price of farm produce fell to about pre-war level, in some instances lower; wages were necessarily cut, but worse than that, there was not employment enough to go around and millions of men and women were out of work.

The conditions just described were so bad in some of the large cities that the public provided soup kitchens to feed those who were unfortunate enough not to be able to feed themselves. It was observed that a large number who came to these soup kitchens wore silk shirts and other extravagant clothes in proportion. Had they saved merely the amount of money they wasted on their backs, they would not have been compelled to beg.

The public should set itself firmly against a repetition of the industrial condition of 1920. We are apparently entering upon a period of quite wide prosperity. Indeed, it may be quite accurately said, we think, that the nation is now in a prosperous state of affairs. There is no unemployment. There is more work than men. There seems to be ahead a great building and extension program. Insofar as building homes and reasonable extension upon the part of well-tried industries, safely financed, is concerned the operations are to be approved. Unconsidered extensions or attempts to operate upon a shoestring, so to speak, should be condemned not only because of the obvious failure ahead but generally such failures take down with them innocent persons who have attempted to make what they believed to be safe investments.

In a period of great prosperity there is always a correspondingly great danger. Optimism is liable to stretch itself into foolhardiness. Some dealers or brokers are likely to quote artificial prices in a plain attempt to gouge the public, such as the recent sugar scandal. Farmers are likely to buy and undertake the cultivation of larger tracts of land than they can handle or finance. Working men are likely to forget that a home which is paid for is a splendid investment and that a savings account is another. And everyone is likely to overlook the fact that, almost over night, the prosperity may cease and the necessity for soup kitchens appear.

If all will content themselves with a reasonable margin of profit, save a fair portion of the money that goes through their hands, make investments cautiously and lend credit as carefully, the result obtained will undoubtedly be a longer continuation of prosperity than can be procured in any other manner; for this much is certain, that there is plenty of wealth in America for all and that a sufficient part of the wealth of the country, annually, goes through the hands of every mature person, such that, were a fair percentage of it saved, that person would acquire a position of independence. The truth of it is that we have many millions who are very wasteful people, making no preparations during the period of sunshine for protection from the coming storm. It would appear that prosperity, like any other economic condition, can be conserved by careful handling and can be destroyed by the flippant, indifferent, wasteful or heedless conduct of a people.

DO HAVE SOME MORE IODIN

The wool poor sheep, the hairless pig, and the bald headed man—far be it from me to assert that there is any scientific reason for associating these three phenomena. I just suggest the idea that all three of them may have something to blame their feed for, or to put it more accurately, they may not have something which they ought to—well, why beat about the bush? Is the lack of sufficient iodine in water or food accountable for failure of growth of hair?

Premature loss of hair, thin scraggly hair, premature graying or fading of the hair are commonly seen in persons with deficient thyroid gland function; the thyroid gland receives and disburses the iodine in the body. On the other hand, persons with excessive thyroid function, such as occurs in exophthalmic goitre, often have a remarkably fine luxuriant growth of hair.

The hairlessness of the pig and the wool poverty of the sheep may be prevented by supplying the animals with an adequate amount of iodine, in or with their daily feed. I do not say that iodine will cure baldness. Let there be no possible misunderstanding about that. I merely suggest that an adequate iodine ration may prevent, not cure—premature falling of the hair and premature grayness, just as it may prevent premature wrinkling of the skin, premature hardening of the arteries, premature aging of the whole body.

I have told here how one may make sure of getting his or her iodine or her iodine ration. I referred to the fact that nearly all domestic salt now contains practically no iodine, whereas sea salt is rich in iodine. And I quote the opinion of Dr. Quimby, who believes that an adequate iodine ration prevents high blood pressure, has tonic virtues, increases exuberance of spirits and ambition, improves the circulation especially when the individual has cold hands and cold feet and a cold skin. Dr. Quimby even advises a proper iodine ration to prevent athletes from going stale, to postpone the onset of old age, to restore the worn out or exhausted business man something of his former pep.

A suitable iodine ration would no doubt prevent simple goitre in thousands of children, just as minute doses of iodine in one form or another in the drinking water for a few weeks each spring and fall have prevented goitre in thousands of school children.

Sea food—any edible plant or fish or shell fish from the sea—is an ideal source of iodine, but people living far from the sea get too little sea food, sometimes practically none, owing to transportation expense. Nevertheless at any reasonable cost, some such food at the times a week, if obtainable, is well worth the money as a health and efficiency investment for any family.

It is not at all fanciful to say that as sufficient ration of iodine will even dispel the gloom from many a household.

And, finally, if we ate enough iodine, I am quite sure it would not be so very, very easy for us to grow fat.

LOOKING BACKWARD

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO
Friday, May 6, 1898

William Nelson of Manitowish, formerly of Appleton, called on friends here.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Robinson.

Mr. and Mrs. John VanAlstyne removed their household goods to Kimberly, where they were to make their home.

P. A. Laffey of Oshkosh was organizing a new band for the Second regiment.

Mrs. Cornelia Dane was about to take her departure for Ashland, where she was to make her home with her daughter, Mrs. Fred Colvin.

Notice from the government office at Oshkosh was to the effect that the water in Lake Winnebago was 16 inches above the crest of the Menasha dam.

Extensive arrangements were being made for the Catholic convention to be held in Appleton the last of the month. Many of the delegations had chartered special trains, and were to be accompanied by bands.

TEN YEARS AGO
Friday, May 2, 1913

W. H. Delano of New London was in Appleton on business.

A son was born the previous Wednesday to Mr. and Mrs. John West.

The engagement of Miss Jeanette Hawes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Austin Hawes, and Carlton Smith was announced the day previous.

Otto Zuehlke, A. A. Ruster and Frank Rollin returned from St. Louis, where they went as guests of the Mutual Brewing company to inspect the latter's $1,000,000 plant.

Flamingoes In Africa Color The Landscape

(From a Bulletin of the National Geographic Society.)

Kenya, a colony in Africa, which is none other than a vast, open, British East Africa, appears in London dispatches because immigrants from India who settled there wish to retain their full British citizenship rights in their new homeland.

Though seldom heard from, Kenya is one of the most fascinating regions of the globe, geographically speaking. At its southeast corner is Lake Victoria, second largest fresh water lake in the world. Along its shores dwell a people whose nudity is a symbol of their modesty and whose men are as beautifully formed specimens of their sex as are the Marquesas women of theirs.

Just across Kenya's southern border is Kilimanjaro, highest mountain in Africa, and near its center is Kenya peak, also volcanic, which tops Mount Whitney by some 3,000 feet. Cutting across the colony is the famous Rift valley, here from 20 to 40 miles wide, and generally several thousand feet below the plateau's general level.

However, it is as a zoo and a luxuriant botanical garden that Kenya makes its chief appeal to the nature-loving visitor. Perhaps its most amazing single spectacle is the flamingo colony on the northern shores of Lake Hannington. The banks are dazzling white with the birds' guano. Their nests are made of mud spread like mole hills on the low plain.

FLAMINGOS COLOR LANDSCAPE

The adult bird has a rose-pink neck and body, the beak is purple and scarlet, the wing feathers are crimson. For a mile or so before one reaches their haunt he can hear these birds—the splash and the swish of 1,000,000 or so becomes tumultuous as he approaches.

Hippopotami swim in the shallow waters of this bay, antelope and gnu infest its shores. Its port, Kisumu, is the terminus of the Uganda steamship line, which lands rubber, ivory and hides here for railway shipment to the coast.

From the time one sees a belle of Mombasa, fully clad, with circles painted on her cheeks and her hands dyed purple, until he reaches the shores of Victoria, where dwell the Apollo-like Kavirondo men, he is amazed by the variety of human tribes. Travel there, says one enthusiast, is "like walking through miles of living statuary."

Though unclothed the Kavirondos are much bedecked. Every circumference of the human form affords, from chest and stomach to ankle and wrist is wire-wrapped. The women add other decoration, a tail-like tuft suspended from their waist line in the rear.

The fierce Masai tribesmen go in for wire jewelry, too, but their speciality is the carrying. Soon after a child is born its ear is pierced with a silver and the aperture is enlarged from year to year until a huge disc may be inserted therein.

The Masai tribesmen have less pleasant customs. They place their dead outside their settlements for the hyenas to devour, hence that animal is sacred. They bleed cattle to drink hot blood. They kill game with poisoned arrows. They drug their dogs before the chase to make them more ferocious.

Sparsely populated a region where the altitude offsets the equatorial heat and fertility invites farming is due largely to these warriors Masai whose former livelihood was gained principally by raids on their neighbors. Many of them have settled down to tilling the soil.

Another native tribe, the Andorabos, formerly lived largely upon flesh of the colobus monkey. This skin has a market value because of its silky black and white hair and the tail with an immense plume at the end. They, too, turned to the soil as the British imposed restrictions on monkey killing to save the animals from extinction.

Kenya has a native population of about 4,000,000, entirely negligible so far as the present political problem is concerned. The issue is between about 5,000 Europeans and six times that many Asiatics, Arabs and Indians. The claim of the latter to British citizenship necessarily raises a question about the interests of the European colonists who have been pioneers in developing the country's resources.

The Question Box

(Any reader can get the answer to any question by writing The Appleton Post-Crescent Information Bureau, Frederick J. Haskin, Director, Washington, D. C. This office applies strictly to information. The Bureau cannot give advice on legal, medical and financial matters. It does not attempt to settle domestic troubles, nor to undertake exhaustive research on any subject. Q. What is the value of all the stocks and bonds that are handled by the New York Stock Exchange? A. T. R.

A. The market value of securities naturally changes from day to day, but the par value of all the securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange exceeds sixty billion dollars.

Q. How many shoe factories are there in this country? T. T. T.

A. In 1921 there were 1,702 shoe factories in the United States.

Q. How do you figure what the good will of a business is worth? M. C. V.

A. It has been a commonly accepted practice to value good will of a going concern at five or six times its average net profits per year. In a court proceeding recently, however, the good will of a well known firm was appraised at ten years' net profit.

Q. How were speeches taken down before shorthand was invented? M. E. C.

A. Shorthand is a very old device, but before its use scribes were present at public meetings for the purpose of making notes of the orations. These later were amplified under the direction of the speaker.

Q. When was sperm oil first used for lamps? A. D. P.

A. Its use is of ancient origin. The oil was usually obtained from stranded whales. Whale fishing for oil does not seem to have been common before the 17th century.

Q. What is police power? R. D. D.

A. No adequate definition can be given of police power, the courts usually deciding in each case as to its extent. In its general acceptance it means the power of a municipal government to preserve the welfare of the public by prohibiting anything that is contrary to it and demanding

TWO FLOORS OF GOOD THINGS TO WEAR

New Islands Off Florida Coast

(From The Scientific American.)

The story of the coral islands of the south seas is well known to all. Ages were needed for the little workers to build those wonderful keys and islands that dot the Caribbean. Less wonderful, perhaps, from an engineering standpoint, but not less interesting, is the story of the islands of Biscayne bay, eight of which are either complete or under construction.

This beautiful stretch of water lies opposite Miami on the southern coast of Florida, and is formed by a reef which runs north for several miles, where it joins the mainland. Southward this reef is continued in a series of keys for about 12 miles or so. Opposite Miami the bay is about three and a half miles wide and is spanned by the famous million-dollar causeway connecting the city of Miami with that of Miami beach, built on the coral reef mentioned above, which is about a half mile wide at this point.

To the tourist who comes to Miami to escape the cold and snow, the appearance of an island where the year before he saw dry water may not mean a great deal. It means something, however, to those who have in hand the work of building islands.

In the first place, the bay bottom must be purchased from the state at $500 per acre. Next it is necessary to obtain permission from the war department to fill in. Then comes staking the ground—or water—off, and putting down the dredge to mark the boundary of the island-to-be. After this the real work begins.

Enormous suction dredges of 1,000 to 1,500 horsepower are employed, while a crew of as many as 48 men is sometimes necessary to keep things running smoothly. The pipes, 12 to 20 inches in diameter, through which the dredgings are pumped, are laid on pontoons often for the distance of a mile from the dredge to the fill. When dredging in sand as high as 10,000 cubic yards can be filled in 24 hours, though only 20 per cent of what comes through the pumps is solid matter. Progress is slower, of course, when rock is encountered, but when this happens, the dredge can be moved to a more suitable location. With water 10 to 12 feet deep, 50 to 60 acres can be filled in about six months.

A transformation soon takes place. A flourishing community has sprung up, and green grass and trees, streets, sidewalks and every modern convenience induce the housekeeper or investor to pay for a building site in altogether novel and tropical surroundings.

Ancient Arabs Fond Of Music

(Emile Vuilleumoz, in Le Temps, Paris.)

Many charming stories show us with what intense delight the ancient Muslimans regarded music. So strong was this pleasure that it often seemed a sin to the virtuous sons of the prophet Abdullah, when he heard a chorus of women's voices, was greatly disturbed. "I should never have believed," he said, "that art could go so far. These are truly seductive strains that stir the heart and trouble the senses. That is why some people condemn music." The illustrious Souraydi, an incomparable singer, having been afflicted with painful attacks of rheumatism, believed that he was being punished by God for having devoted his life to music and he gave himself up to religious rites of the most austere devotion.

The Caliph Walid showed his musical feelings in a highly original way. When a piece was finished he often would hastily throw off his cloak and plunge into a pool of water or perfumed wine, sink into it, rise, emerge from the water, dress himself in new clothes and begin some new melody that chanced to please him. And he presented to the singers who had entertained him the garments, made of precious cloth embroidered with gold, in which he dressed after each new bath, adding thereto 1,000 pieces of gold.

Draws New Admirers In Her Concert

Miss Sindahl Shows Her Progress As Artist In Program Here

A good-sized audience of Appleton, Neenah and Kaukauna people was given a delightful program at Lawrence Memorial chapel on Thursday evening by Miss Lillian May Sindahl, coloratura soprano of Chicago, formerly of Neenah, and a former student of Lawrence Conservatory of Music. Miss Sindahl who has sung often in Appleton and Neenah both before and after she went to Chicago, gave what was undoubtedly her best program here. Her beautifully clear and sweet soprano voice shows marked improvement and indicates that its owner will go far along the road to musical fame. By request Miss Sindahl sang the Norwegian Echo Song by Thrane with which she first earned the title of "Chicago's Norwegian Nightingale," and her presentation of this number was a definite means of favorable comparison by the audience most of which had heard it sung before. Her ability to sing the clear calls of the song followed by the echoes is one possessed by few artists of more mature years.

The program was varied, including many delightful numbers in everything from arias of the operas to Negro spirituals. "Twilight," a simple colorful number by Glen was one of the loveliest of the entire evening and Miss Sindahl sang it with splendid sympathy as with the number "Out of My Soul's Great Sorrow" by Franz. She did especially well in her operatic numbers including one from "Mefistofele," the waltz song from Carmen, "Bei Raggio Lusinghieri" from "Semiramide" by Rossini.

The young artist was literally showered with bouquets during the concert. Her many friends in Appleton and the surrounding community took the opportunity at this concert to show their appreciation of her work and its apparent success.

One of the outstanding improvements in Miss Sindahl's concert in comparison with her appearance at Neenah two years ago was the ease with which she now appears upon the concert platform. Miss Sindahl now not only gives a delightful program of music but is also extremely confident during the concert.

The next year the choir won the same fame under the same director, defeating choirs from all over the world.

Since that time the sons of Wales have maintained the standard set by the Crystal Palace victories. Is Last Of Child Plays For Season

Children's Stock Company Will Present Mother Goose Pageant

The last of the series of children's programs, planned entirely for children by the Children's Stock company of Appleton Womans club, will take place at Appleton theatre on Saturday afternoon when Mother Goose herself will introduce many of her famous characters in "The Queen's Tea Party" and an informal program in which the children will see these characters at play. The series of plays has been among the most successful undertakings of the dramatic workshop and another series will probably be given next year.

Just to give you a little idea of what Mother Goose has in store on Saturday, here is a peek at the program. It seems that all through the history of nursery rhymes, the Knave of Hearts has been greatly misunderstood and maligned. Remember the rhyme about "the knave of hearts, he stole those tarts? Mother Goose maintains that that is not so, and she will show how the whole thing really happened by presenting "The Queen's Tea Party."

THE CHARACTERS

Miss Emma Barclay, who has appeared in practically all of the children's programs, will be Mother Goose; Miss Lillian Smith will be the queen; Frances Nellison, the knave; Stetana Schumaker, Miss Muffet; Miss Ruth Johnson, Curly Locks; Miss Marie Le-wandoski, Jack; Miss Ruth Pederson, Jill; Miss Naomi Clark, Bo Peep; Miss Edna Shultz, Mistress Mary; Miss Anne Boelson, Humpty Dumpty; Miss Evangeline Wirick, Dancer; Miss Elsie Mann, Tret-Miss Helen Sofa, the Spider; the Misses Mary Gloudemans and Dorothy Calnin, the cows; the Misses Katherine Wood and Florence Hertel, the lambs.

After the case for the knave has been presented, Mother Goose will show many of her children busy with the things which the rhymes say about them. There will be Curly Locks serving a fine sauce, Little Miss Muffet busy eating curds and whey, Little Boy Blue blowing his horn at his cows, Little Bo Peep with her sheep and Humpty Dumpty sitting on a wall watching Mistress Mary and her pretty maids.

WILL GIVE DANCES

The pretty maids will come to life and then a most interesting part of the program will be given. These pretty maids will be camp fire girls and their friends and they will take part in folk dances of the different nations. Among the dances will be Now 'Tis Christmas, Time, Swedish; Weave the Wadmal, Danish Weaving Song; Little Goose Girl, Bohemian; Roman Soldiers, Old English; Thief, Norwegian; Ace of Diamonds, Danish; Little Man in a Flax, Danish; Gustaf's Toast, Swedish; The Wheat, Bohemian; Red and Blue Violets, Bohemian; Raspberry Bush, Danish; Will You Go to the Woods Today, Swedish and Handkerchief Dance, Bohemian.

STATE RESCINDS ORDER TO CUT TAX OFFICE SERVICE

Provides Funds So Income As-essor May Continue Usual Program

The recent order of the tax commission to dismiss clerical help and eliminate field work of income assessors during the months of May and June has been revoked. As a result, Anton Oppgaard, acting assessor of incomes, has resumed that part of his duties having to do with supervising of local assessors in Outagamie and Waupaca counties. Miss Myrtle Kranzsch, deputy, who was dismissed for two months on May 1, has been reengaged.

A shortage in the balance of the fiscal year which necessitated the original order, has been relieved. It was announced by the tax commission. The reversal of the order was made possible through the act of the secretary of state transferring to the credit of the general appropriation an amount approximating the shortage.

"Heretofore it was the ruling of the secretary of state's department," the commission says, "that credit for bills for municipal accounting service be withheld until the same had actually been paid. On calling attention to section 20.09 of the statutes appropriating to this department, sums equal to the charges accruing to the state for accounting services, the secretary consented to transfer to the credit of our general appropriation the amount of all such bills as soon as the same are certified for the balance of the fiscal year.

"It should be understood, however, that the necessity for economy still exists. The transfer of these claims will correspondingly reduce the revenue available for the next fiscal year.
Field expenses were heavy during the months of May and June, 1922, and also very unequal in districts. By limiting field work to the most important districts and combining trips to the same general locality so as to avoid duplication of expense, a substantial saving can be effected."

Nurses' School May Be Deferred By Hospital

Although all the furnishings for the new St. Elizabeth hospital building have been ordered for June 1, no date has been set for the completion and the opening of the building. Plans for the nurses' training course and for the special obstetrical department will not be completed until after the visit of the mother general of the Franciscan order late in May.

It is thought that it will be impossible to start the nurses' training course this fall since moving into the new building will not be possible until at least the middle of the summer.
Special equipment and instructors will be necessary for this undertaking and it is almost impossible to provide them so soon after the enormous task of getting the new building ready for use.

The obstetrical department depends more largely on the plans which the mother general has made for the hospital. When she has visited the nurse here and made a thorough inspection of their needs for the new building with its various departments, an announcement will be made of the things which will be included now and those which will be added in the very near future.

Although the big construction work of the hospital building is completed, the work of finishing the rooms will take considerable time. Most of the doors and windows are in, but the hardware is yet to be placed. The plumbing work is well along and the wiring is completed. Installation of the lights and other fixtures will also take considerable time.

H. S. NOW TRANSMITS MESSAGES BY RADIO

The transmitting outfit of the radio apparatus at Appleton high school has been completed and the boys who have been working on it have talked by telegraph and telephone to many of the surrounding communities. That there will be no broadcasting station at Appleton high school is the opinion of those in charge of the radio work because of the enormous amount of money which it would take to enlarge the equipment for broadcasting.

Most of the work on the set has been done by the senior members of the radio club, Dallas Jansen, Edward Dohr, Joseph Dohr and John Harriman. The station is made permanent for future experimentation and new and improved parts may be added at any time. The power used is now 10 watts, but there is a provision for 20 watts next year.

Best Bib And Tucker Is Every Day's Dress Now

Back in the little home town when everyone dolled up in his best bib and tucker on Sunday and went to church or wished a visit on his friends it was farthest from the thought of most persons that some day the age old custom would pass and the Sunday best would be worn not only on state occasions but every day in the week. In other words there would be no Sunday best.

One no longer enjoys the treat of seeing a whole village turn out in holiday attire once a week to promenade up the avenue, for the promenade lasts during the entire week and on Sundays merely starts over again. Although a few choice garments may still be kept in reserve for special events the fad now is to wear what one has until it is worn out and then replace it with something else.

A boy's first long trousers or a girl's first trailing dress usually came in the form of a Sunday outfit and after being taken off at the close of a sedate Sunday was folded up in tissue paper and laid carefully away until the next dress-up day. Thus the suit with the Sunday label served for many events for many years and less thought was spent on how up-to-date a garment might be.

The revelation comes to the village boy or girl when the big adventure in the city is tried. There the truth of the matter asserts itself and they find the city persons wearing their best to work on Monday mornings. When their wardrobe shows signs of wear, new things are added and worn at once instead of being treasured up for Sunday best for awhile.

The day the president speaks in the city makes no difference in the costumes worn by his fellow business men, so the country boy discovers, as it would back home. Even his fellow business men look the same when he sees them on Sunday as they did when he said good night at closing time Saturday.

Appleton, is planning to leave in June to spend the summer months in France and England.

Most of her time at present is being devoted to making phonograph records of favorite songs, both in solo and home was formerly in Oshkosh, is reported to be in excellent health.

The report that her face was disfigured in an automobile accident was untrue, according to Oshkosh friends who visited her lately.

Red Crown

The High-Grade Gasoline

Everywhere and Everywhere the Same

WITH the constantly increasing number of hard roads, the display lines above take on a new and deep significance. You are getting out into the country more — you are motoring greater distances.

You count your day's mileage by the hundreds—before it was by tens.

You are using more gasoline because hard roads permit greater speed.

No Matter
Where You Go—

you can get Red Crown Gasoline and you won't have to change the adjustment of your carburetor. This would not hold true with some brands of gasoline sold in restricted areas.

Red Crown is the best, most economical gasoline you can buy. Once you have the right carburetor adjustment you can go and keep going without a sputter — you will have an abundance of sustained pulling power and all the speed your engine can develop.

You will find a Red Crown Service Station every few blocks in the city and every few miles in the country.

MARQUETTE TO INVADE LAWRENCE WITH HOST OF STARS

BLUE AND GOLD HERE SATURDAY FOR TRACK MEET

Events To Start At 1 O'clock To Give Visitors Chance To Take Early Train

The Lawrence-Marquette track meet to be held on Lawrence field Saturday will begin at 1 o'clock instead of 2:30 as it was originally announced. The change was made to permit the visiting athletes to take an early train home.

Fifteen events will be in order with Lawrence entering approximately 40 men in the meet.

The affair will be the first athletic meet with Marquette since 1917 when Lawrence and Marquette broke off relations after a football game. A basketball game was played following the gridiron rumble but that game was part of a pro-break schedule.

Lawrence, though with hardly more than two weeks practice compared to Marquette's all winter's drill, is expected to give the Hilltoppers stiff competition. Coach Trevis is expecting that a number of "dark horses" will come to the fore but in the main he is depending much on Aaron Gelsinger, Appleton star, Bill Smith, Eddie Kotal, Courtney, and Lapsley, who have shown up well in the practices.

The four relay men will be selected from Kotal, Good, Hunt, Barlemont and Courtney.

A. J. Downer, athletic director of the Milwaukee normal school, will be the referee.

Milwaukee—Anticipating tough competition on their hands when they meet Lawrence college at Appleton on Saturday, Coach Conrad M. Jennings Marquette university track team is this week putting in several hours of hard practice on the Marquette field north of the gymnasium.

Coach Jennings hasn't a line on the Lawrence team and hardly knows what he'll be up against. Realizing however, the strength of Lawrence teams in other years and in other sports he is not letting up a bit in practice and will exert his best effort to cop the honors at Appleton on Saturday.

COLORED BOY IS STAR

The Hilltop track team returned from the Drake relay games in good shape looking forward to their season of intercollegiate meets. At Des Moines Marquette placed only in the discus throw. Rolfe McMahon, the star colored athlete on the Hilltop, taking second with better than 135 feet. Other trackmen showed well but in a field of more than 1,000 athletes did not stand high enough in the qualifying rounds to land in the final.

Appleton fans will have the opportunity of seeing several of Coach Frank Murray's gridiron heroes on the track. At least five of the Marquette grid warriors who helped to carry the Blue and Gold banner through the last season undefeated and who are expected to be in battle next fall when two international contests will be staged, are included among Coach Jennings' entries. They are Capt. Gordon McNutt, who was end on the football team; Shalota, halfback; McMahone, tackle; Leichfuss, half; Taugher, fullback who has played his three years of football and who scored the one Marquette touchdown against Notre Dame in 1921; O'Neill, Dilwig and Shatola all notables on the football field.

HERE ARE THE ENTRIES

Spring Football Game Unearths "Finds" For High School Grid Squad

A youngster named Emmonds, playing at fullback was the "find" of the spring football practice of Appleton high school, which was completed Thursday afternoon with a regulation game in Jones park between the Blues and Blacks.

Emmonds, who never handled the pugkin before tore through the center at will and carried the ball over for the only touchdown made in the game by the Blues, who won 6 to 0. Emmonds later was shifted by Coach Denney to the Blacs in an effort to give the youngsters some offensive work and soon was tearing through his former teammates almost ten yards at a time. Another youngster who is promising his things for next fall is Kilpenstein who subbed as full on the Blues.

GREEN BACKGROUND

Bursting buds and the newest kinds of grass in the Jones park furnished a background for the football game in contrast to the chilly atmosphere of the autumn games.

The lone touchdown was made in the first three minutes. The Blues kicked off and the Blacks advanced the ball 5 yards on three downs. Bloomer, quarterback, or the Blacks attempted a forward pass to Green and, Stamme intercepted and carried the ball back 17 yards. On the first play, Courtney, quarterback of the Blues, threw a pass to Don Hyde. He was downed on the Blacks' 2 yard line. On the next play, Linmons carried the ball over.

SEE-SAW REST OF WAY

The gridgers saw saved over the field for the balance of the play with the Blacks going for an almost certain touchdown when the game was terminated.

Captain Clem Gerou, who was unable to take part in the contest, acted as head linesman. Pete Brice was the referee and David Schwegel was the timekeeper.

Among the men who showed up well Thursday were Courtney, Vaughn, Warden, Smith, Phelps, Stearns and Fischer.

RUTH'S PEG WINS

Washington, D. C.—New York made it three out of four from Washington by winning the final game of the series on Thursday, 3 to 2. Warmouth's wildness proved costly while Pennock pitched effectively until the ninth in which when a fine throw by Ruth ended a Washington rally.

Kinks-o' the Links by "PRO"

Smith and Jones are in a match. Smith's ball strikes Jones' ball which is at rest on the fairway. The contact go deflected Jones' ball that a very good lie is turned into a bad one, the ball finally coming to rest in a deep rut, it being practically impossible to play out of it. Has Jones any recourse or must the happening be regarded as a "rub of the green?"

Jones has a right to lift his ball and drop it without penalty as near as possible to the place where it lay before being struck by Smith's ball and deflected into the rut.

If a player dives his ball out of bounds, what is the proper procedure as to the next shot? Is there a line of distinction between ball driven from the tee and fairway prior to going out of bounds?

If a ball lie out of bounds, the player shall play his next stroke as nearly as possible at the spot from which the ball out of bounds was played, adding a penalty stroke to the score for the hole. If the stroke was played from the teeing ground a ball may be teed; in all other cases a ball shall be dropped.

PINDLE LOSES SECOND BLOCK

Louis J. Engles, Green Bay, now has a 20 point lead in the 150 point three cushion billiard match with Harold Pindle, Appleton, as the result of Engles taking the second block, played Thursday night in the Green Bay Elks clubhouse, 50 to 32. The final block of 50 points will be played off at Green Bay next Thursday night. The score for each now is: Engles 100, Pindle 80.

The contest Thursday night went 20 innings, one less than the first block played in the Carr & Hansen billiard room a week ago. Engles started with a run of five while Pindle's best was four.

Bad breaks stopped Pindle from getting a bigger score though. Engles played in championship form.

Accompanying Pindle to the Bay were Eugene Carr, Harry Oaks, L. E. Damkoehler and Donald McCoy.

BUNCH PROPOSALS TO CHANGE BASIC LAW OF COUNTRY

Many Changes in United States Constitution Are Advocated

Special to Post-Crescent

Washington—Proponents of a series of amendments to the federal constitution without changing its fundamental structure by merely making it elastic to present day needs are considering incorporating them all in one resolution so that they may be acted on at the same time.

There is strong opposition to any movement which would lead to a constitutional convention for revision of the basic law, nor is there any certainty of adoption of any of the minor proposals in the face of a strong nationwide sentiment against further tinkering with the constitution. The last congress defeated all proposals presented, but government officials members of congress, and powerful nationwide organizations are continuing a campaign for changes asserted to be necessary to permit legislation which the people are believed to demand.

One of the proposed amendments is to change the political year which now starts on March 4, with many important consequences following. It is contemplated to make the political year start on the first week in January for congress and the third week in January for the president. The reason for this difference in political year for the president is to cover the possibility of the selection of president being thrown into the house. If that should happen, the decision would be made by the new house rather than the old one. It is argued that this amendment would do away with the distinction between long and short sessions. It would do away with the present anomalous situation of where a superceded house continues to function for one full session after a new house has been elected. It would mean that the members elected in November would begin to function in the following January instead of waiting for thirteen months after their election, unless summoned into extra session. Now a member who is discredited, or turned down by his constituency, continues to sit for an entire session.

A second proposed amendment covers the method of selecting the president, doing away with the electoral college, which, at best, is a mere form and at times gives rise to serious troubles.

A third proposed amendment is to change the method of amending the constitution. There is here a very peculiar situation, that an amendment once proposed to the people is always pending. The present method of amending is by a joint resolution which must be passed by a two-thirds vote of each house and then ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the states or by conventions of three-fourths of the states. As congress may prescribe. As a matter of fact the joint resolution proposing amendment has always prescribed ratification by the legislatures of three-fourths of the states. These legislatures have in no case been elected with reference to what action they shall take on such proposed amendments. They, therefore, receive no mandate from the people of their state in respect thereto. Many, accordingly, believe that the ratification should be by the people themselves, by popular vote, rather than by either legislature or convention.

A FRIENDLY GREETING
Tuesday afternoon on North St. I spied a small child riding on a kiddie car. Just then a large Newfoundland dog came along and getting close to the baby licked his face. The child looked surprised but calmly wiped the moisture off on the sleeve of his sweater.

NO, PLEASE DON'T SWEAR
We were playing the other night and one of the fellows got mad when he was "it" and took it out on the rest of us by using some uncalled for language. A man came across the street and called the boy a poor sport. Then he said: "And I don't want any more swearing around here so get to h— out of here!"

K. B.

CLOSE SHAVE FOR HER
Coming home from work Thursday evening, I was one of the passengers on the street car who witnessed what would undoubtedly have been a fatal accident, had it not been for the quick action on the part of one man on the car.

The street car was going down Second-st. at a good rate of speed and was just about to make the turn at Mason when a child, about three years old, suddenly appeared on the track and running directly in front of the car came on toward it, apparently unaware of her danger, intent only on meeting her daddy who had been to be standing in the front vestibule of the car. Before the motor man had fully taken in the situation, the father had jumped off the moving car and in about three strides had reached the child and grasping her by one arm, swung her out of harm's way. He picked her up in his arms and as he walked away with her, she kissed him innocently unaware that it was she who caused the motorman and more than one onlooker to remark, "Mighty close shave for her!"

Kildare turned to Mercedes. As she did so, Esteban managed to get to his feet by clutching a bedpost. Melody came in just then and caught the boy as he tottered.

Esteban struggled to free himself from Melody's arms. "Don't touch me!" he cried. "Damn the Double A!"

"The boy was no match for Melody's strength. Against his will he was forced down to the bed.

"For the love of Pete! What's the matter?" the happy-go-lucky poet demanded.

"Matter? My father's been killed! Killed! Some one in this outfit did it, too!"

"You don't think we would do a rotten thing like that, do you?" Blaise asked sharply.

"Please," Mercedes begged. "Don't make another scene."

"Anything to get away," replied Esteban.

"When I drove up with the rig, Acklin called me in and told me I should go. If you'll give me a hand, we'll get started."

CHAPTER XVI
PASSING OF OLD IRONSIDES

The day of Jose's funeral dawned bright and clear. Little dustclouds rose in a hundred places from the desert roads, as the widely scattered people from the Little Washoe country and the valley north of the Humboldt gathered to do honor to their murdered leader.

Quite in contrast with them was the tall, thin man hunched over the wheel of an outlandish contraption that he called an automobile. But the allaged automobile, for all its lack of paint and its unbecoming vitals, was, like its owner, thoroughly efficient. The man was Brand.

Coming all the way from Winemucker.

Acklin was proving, at that moment, his keen interest in Jose's passing. He was in his office, and Morrow and Kildare were with him. The latter's face wore a sullen look.

Acklin was saying: "People in general don't know you, Kildare. That's why I want you to go. You can drop in at the church, or mix in with the crowd at the cemetery."

Blaise nodded his head a little and pulled his hat lower over his eyes. He had been carefully scrutinizing a rifle that stood behind Acklin's desk. He reached over and picked it up and broke it open. It was an almost new automatic. He threw a shell out of the chamber.

"I reckon I'd better take this," he murmured offhandedly. "The old iron you gave me when I came bucking about every second shot. This is a real rifle; brand new, too."

"No, don't take any gun," Cash drawled. "Ain't you still got that hat trick if anybody fumps you?"

That's right, Kildare. Acklin went on. "I'm sending you because I particularly don't want a fight. You had better get started."

Blaise had palmed one of the shells from Acklin's gun; and he compared it, as soon as he got away, with the one he had found on the rocks. There was no question of their likeness.

The Basque, bareheaded under the blazing sun, murmured age-old Latin prayers for the repose of their leader, as the body was lowered to its last resting-place. Kildare took off his hat and whispered "Amen" in unison with the mourners. It was an unconscious, reverential touch; a response to a tug at his emotions that surprised him.

He saw Mercedes, with Basilio's hand in hers, kneeling beside the grave as the earth was shoveled on the coffin. As if in response to his penetrating gaze, she turned and saw him.

Their eyes conveyed to each other an unspoken message. Mercedes seemed to appeal dumbly to him in her misery. Kildare stepped forward, but he stopped almost immediately as he saw an expression of intense fear creep over the girl's face.

Romero and Salvador had recognized the Double A man.

They drew near, and still Blaise made no move. Kent wondered why he did not draw. Romero had his six-gun ready for action.

"Drop that shootin'-iron quick!" Kent commanded.

It was said so quietly that not a whisper reached Blaise.

But Romero heard and obeyed. Tuscarora was not feeling Sava for Mercedes; no one in the crowd had been conscious of their movements.

"Why does he come here?" Romero questioned savagely.

"It's a sneek for the Double A," Salvador choked.

Kildare's blood leaped.

"I'll take that from no boss!" he cried.

He used the cow-man's term of contempt for the Basque, with a shade of emphasis that meant dead by assault.

"Kildare was tending to his own business," Tuscarora stated loud enough for all to hear. "These boys butted in on him—tried to jump him. We won't have any rumpus."

CHAPTER XVII
FRIENDS TO THE RESCUE

Long after the mourners had dispersed, Kildare and Tuscarora sat in their saddles at the gate of the cemetery.

Tuscarora had swung his horse around, and was staring intently at the rise back of the cemetery down which Blaise had come. Kildare saw immediately the cause of the little man's interest. Silhouetted against the sky were six horsemen. As the two of them watched, the riders separated. One went north, and the others dashed away to the east.

Kent whirled on Blaise. "Is that your bunch?" he demanded.

"I came alone," the Double A man shot back, quick to realize the insinuation. "I think I recognize the big fellow ahead!"

"Yeah?"

"Bodine! Let's find out what they're going on their mind."

"You said it, son. I don't fancy this Mr. Bodine even a little bit."

To avoid seeming to trail the mysterious riders, Blaise and Kent chose rather to intercept them by following the road Mercedes had taken. She and Basilio had left with old Peter, the head of the Bengoa clan of Kings River. The gray-haired Basque was an uncle to them by marriage.

The horsemen Tuscarora had seen were swifter. Rounding a bend in the road old Peter drove right into them. With a distinct sense of alarm, the girl recognized Bodine. The men with him were little calculated to restore her composure.

Bodine had no intention of letting them go. His knees were tight, and he revealed in it.

He bent down confidentially.

"I lost my head a bit the last time I was at the hacienda. I was as blind as the kid here. I guess. And I'm sorry for what I said; though I ain't sorry I kissed you."

He felt, rather than saw, Mercedes' glance.

"I learnt somethin' that night, though. I'm a peaceable man from now on. I got an injunction yesterday morning in Winemucker that'll keep anybody from touching that creek for thirty days. Seein' is believin'. I want to show it to you."

Mercedes' eyes snapped.

"You waste our time," she said defiantly. "I do not care what you have, or what you say. I know, I do not go with you."

"Oh, yes, you will, Senorita," he smiled. "We ain't startin' no argument we can't finish. Now you turn that team around, old graybeard!" he bawled at Uncle Peter.

Blaise and Tuscarora crested the rise at that instant and rode rapidly down the draw. They saw the fractious, panicky team with the horsemen trying to turn them.

"Something stirring, all right," Kent called to Blaise. "Better take this gun. I got my rifle."

They were within a hundred yards of the rig before Bodine discovered them.

"What's the big excite?" Blaise demanded in steely tones.

Basilio had recognized Kildare. "I want to go home, Mr. Blaise," he cried.

It snapped the tension.

"It's home for you, little chief," Mercedes bit her lip as she saw Kildare lift the blind boy to his horse's back. Why did this man alternately hurt and befriend her? She became conscious of the gradual swing of his horse to a position protecting her from the sinister look of Bodine's companions. Tuscarora's careless hold rifle did not escape her, nor did it escape the attention of Gloomey.

"Ain't you afraid that there gun might go off, too?"

"My name's Kent—and it might," the lover of peace drawled. It brought a laugh from Bodine.

"By the way," Joe went on, addressing the rancher. "Don't you get to thinkin' we're loked because old Jose is gone. I am to string along for quite some little while yet. I got a date to talk to the law right now."

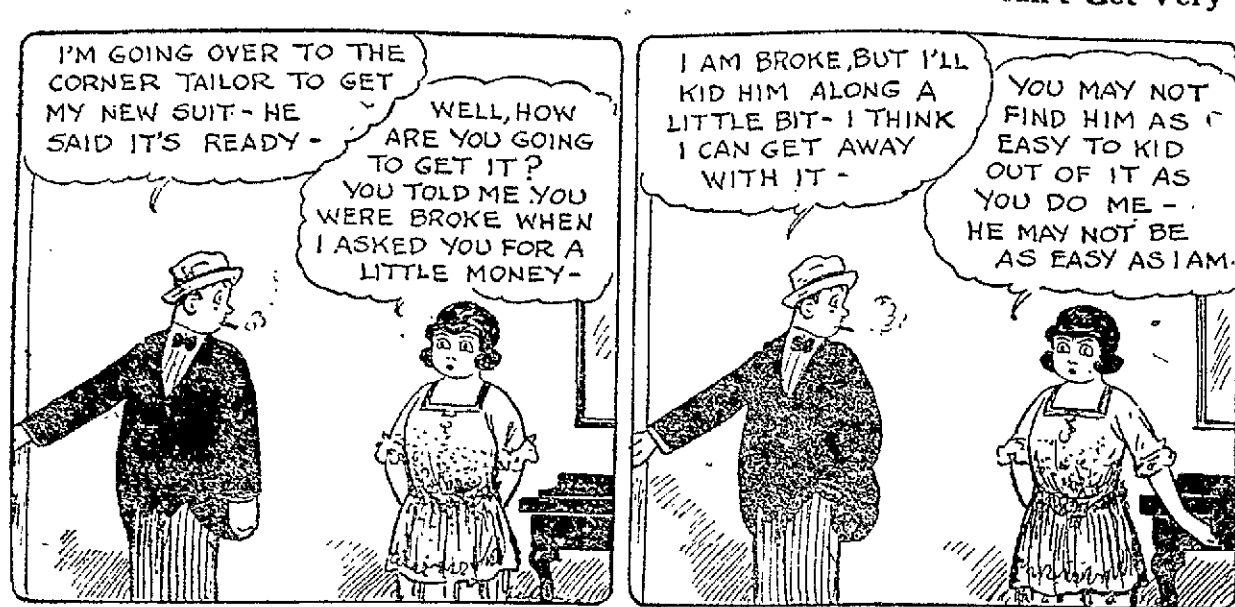

"You're slow," Bodine grinned nastily. "I had my talk with the law yesterday. There won't anybody touch that Creek for thirty days at least. I'll see that my injunction is renewed, too."

Kent concealed his chagrin with a cackling laugh. But Bodine knew he had given him too a job.

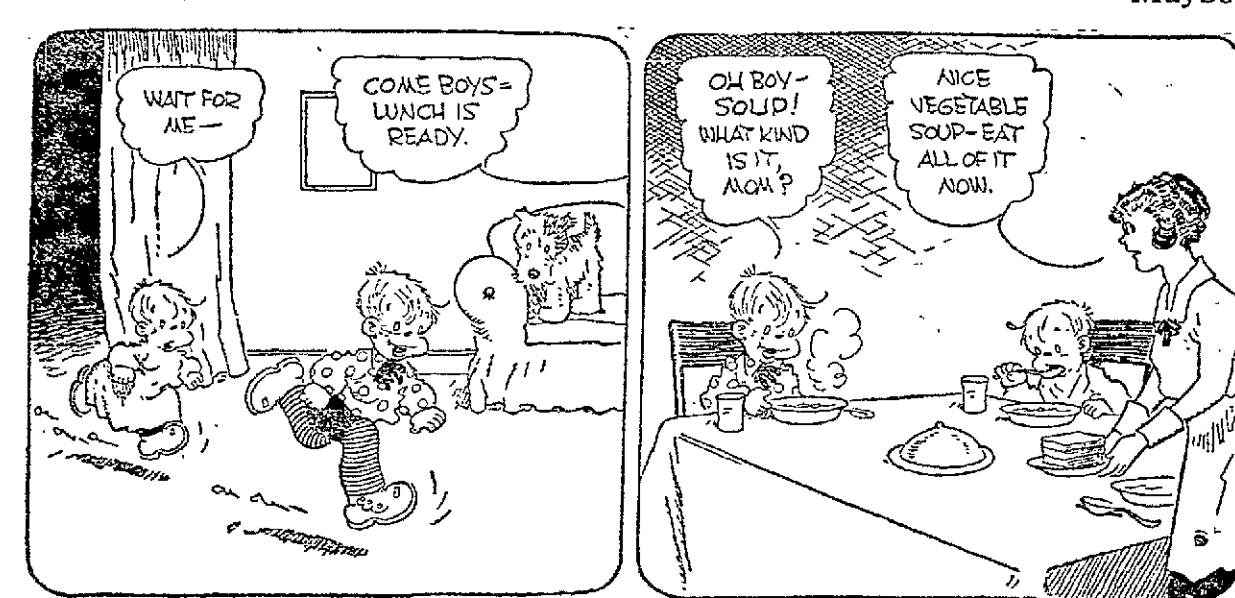

"Let's hit dirt," he shouted to his men. He waved his hand at them, and as he and his followers pulled away

Mothercraft
New Science
For Schools

Atlanta, Ga.—"Mothercraft," the word has a nice, homey sound, hasn't it?

It was invented by May Bliss Dickinson of Trinity Court, Boston and bids fair to become a national movement.

Just as "home economics" came along and saved the day when kitchen drudgery began to pall, so "mothercraft" has, craftily taken out the wrinkles, skin blemishes and avoided the irksomeness of "minding" and tending the baby, and put training for motherhood on an altogether different basis.

Mothercraft originated in Boston as a school course. But it quickly spread over Massachusetts, and now will be nationalized by the 2,000,000 members who make up the General Federation of Women's Clubs, whose representatives now are holding a biennial conference here.

TO SHOW CLUBWOMEN
The work is to be presented by Mrs. Ira Couch Wood of Chicago, chairman of the General Federation Child Welfare Division and nationally known as a child welfare expert and collaborator of Mrs. Dickinson, who serves the federation in an advisory capacity.

"No young girl would purposely kill a child but more than 100,000 babies die in the United States each year because the girls of today, who are the mothers and teachers of tomorrow, are not taught mothercraft," says Mrs. Wood.

"We are trying to train girls for intelligent motherhood, and whether they become mothers, they will have profited by a knowledge of mothercraft."

Almost 50,000 babies die each year in the United States before they are a month old. Investigation has proved that in most cases ignorance of the mother or wrong living conditions have caused the deaths.

TAUGHT IN SCHOOLS
"Mothercraft Headquarters" is now well organized and seeks to introduce scientific mother knowledge into the public schools. The subject is logically placed as part of the home economics course where one exists, or is introduced into the regular hygiene work.

A text book, "Children Well and Happy," by Miss Bliss Dickinson, has been prepared for instruction. Diplomas are to be presented to all graduates.

Many states are following Massachusetts' lead in making mothercraft a federation division of work and Miss Dickinson has recently returned from a lecture trip through Florida, where she spoke before women's clubs and parent-teacher associations.

Dayton (Pa.) schools have since announced that mothercraft will be a regular part of the school work next year.

Adventures Of
The Twins

Light Fingers Meddles
Light Fingers, the bad little fairy who worked for Twelve Tones, the wicked sorcerer, was looking for mischief.

And he found it.
He saw Nancy and Nick start away from the pine-tree where the Green Wizard lived and he knew where they were going.

First they were going to the old apple-tree to give the apple-tree fairy a pair of smoked glasses the kind wizard had made for him.

Second they were going to the Blueberry Patch to give the fairy land lord a pair of extra seeing glasses, the kind wizard had made for him.

Light Fingers was tickled to pieces. Here was a chance for him to play a trick.

He hid down the maple sapling where he'd been hiding, singing his favorite foolish tune about a "dicky bird in a lumber-tree, rum dum, te rum dum, te tum dum."

"Oh never was anyone smarter than me!" he went on, tip-toeing after the Twins as softly as he could go.

Suddenly a branch cracked under his foot.
The Twins stopped and looked around quickly. "What was that?" said Nancy. But nobody answered. For nobody was there. Light Fingers was also light-footed and he'd scurried behind a thorny bush quick as a cat.

UGLINESS IS A SIN BUT BEAUTY IS A VIRTUE

BY MARIAN HALE

"A woman at 30 should be laying the foundation for beauty at 50," says Madame Helene Rubinstein, the famous international beauty expert. "It's easy enough to hold on to prolong one's youthful loveliness, but almost impossible to recreate it, once it has departed."

"If in her youth a girl will learn the scientific care of her complexion and figure she can keep away the wrinkles, skin blemishes and avoid the irksomeness of 'minding' and tending the baby," she continues.

"A woman need not look more than an interesting thirty until she is fifty if she will give herself daily, faithful care. Fat and forty need never occur."

"Ugliness is a sin because it is unnecessary. Beauty is a virtue because it is natural and is every woman's right. Not to crave beauty is unnatural. Not to acquire it is stupid."

Madame Rubinstein speaks with authority. She is the dean of all beauty doctors and for more than a quarter of a century she has been listening to women's prayers—"Make me beautiful."

She has studied medicine as well as beauty culture with Europe's most famous specialists. She has traveled in all parts of the world and learned from women. She maintains beauty salons in London, Paris, Australia and India as well as in New York.

Her European clients have included many members of nobility. The unfortunate Russian empress and the queen of Rumania and other first ladies have taken treatments from her.

Her clients in this country are not all drawn from the social register and the Who's Who of the stage, although she draws heavily from both, but include many business and professional women who look to her to stave off the evidence of physical age and its suggestion of waning powers.

Her treatments are scientific application of common sense and technical knowledge. She doesn't believe in beauty lotions that cover up defects but rather in a program that brings to light every blemish and corrects it so that concealment is unnecessary.

Madame Rubinstein begins in The Post-Crescent a course of 10 lessons in beauty culture which will enable you to keep your years at bay. She will take up the complexion first and tell you how to correct the most common ills and give yourself beauty treatments at home. Don't miss them.

Odd Shaped Vases
Becoming A Fad

The arranging of flowers appeals to most women, and particularly to those who have the ability to give expression to artistic taste. An effective result is not obtained merely by placing a number of flowers in a vase, the species of flower, the shape of the vase or bowl, the position in which it is to be placed must all be taken into consideration.

There is scope for originality in the arrangement of flowers, and very often a few blossoms, tastefully treated will achieve a greater decorative effect than many flowers bunched haphazardly together.

At the moment there is a vogue for odd shaped, square or triangular vases. The best effect with a boat shaped vase is gained by laying a bunch of flowers—violets, jonquils or primroses—at one end. A group of flowers is sometimes placed at one side of a large china bowl and gives a delightfully different look to the table.

Lightly packed bouquets of mixed flowers standing in a tall vase are uncommon and charming. A bouquet of mauve and purple sweet peas, lavender tulips and lilacs surrounded by silvered leaves or silver lace paper, is very pleasing. A square dish of fruit is effective for table decoration. A long trailer creeper arranged around the edge of the dish enhances the appearance.

Excellent for decorative purposes is a diamond-shaped or round painted wooden holder for small candles. This is especially suitable for placing around a birthday cake.

PLEATED SKIRTS
The knife-pleated skirt of white crepe de chine is to be one of the most popular pieces in the summer wardrobe. With a sweater, coat or overblouse it forms an attractive costume.

WORKING IN GARDEN
When you work in the garden you will find it convenient to wear an apron of stout muslin, with pockets in which to carry the trowel, shears, trowel and other things you may need.

Household
Suggestions

SEWING MACHINE

A new mullage brush is excellent to clean the joints of your sewing machine.

COOKING VEGETABLES
If the vegetables you put in the soup are for flavoring only they may remain in the broth all the time it cooks, but if they are to be dished in the soup they should be put in only as far in advance as is needed to cook them thoroughly.

ICING A LAYER CAKE
Dust a little confection on your layer cake before putting on the icing to prevent the icing from running.

FASHIONABLE TIRRANS
Some of the snuggest tirrans are made of velvet and organdie as well as figured crepe and velvet.

INDIVIDUAL FROCK
One black satin gown which achieves unusual elegance is trimmed with bands of red and green silk heavily over-embroidered in gold threads.

ORGANDIE HATS
Very large hats of organdie, self-trimmed, are to be featured for mid-summer. They are charming for wear with organdie trimmed frocks.

Practical Suits

Suits of camel's hair cloth are a good investment, for they may be worn for town or country with equal appropriateness. Sometimes they are embellished with bands of broad or grosgrain ribbon.

SHORT COATS
Short new coats are said to be taking the place of short jackets with the ties—particularly for sport wear. Box pleated side pleated and accordion pleated skirts are popular with it.

FROM MRS. MARY ALDEN PRESCOTT TO PRISCILLA BRADFORD

MY DEAR PRISBY:
It was very disappointing to me and I presume you were disappointed, too, that you were called home by the illness of your mother before the wedding.

I would not write to you in this fashion did I not know your mother, dear Prissy, a very well, and I was sure you would find as you did that her illness was more a case of selfishness and a desire to have you entirely to herself. You know I tried to persuade you when you got the telegram that this was so. But you, as a dutiful daughter, felt you must return home only to find that my prognostications were perfectly correct.

Whatever I may think my dear Prissy, of this union between my son and Leslie Hamilton between a man whose ancestors have been statesmen, judges, artists and professional men, to the daughter of a man whose early years were spent amid the sweat of a steel mill, I must say that the wedding of John and Leslie was very beautiful.

There was, perhaps, too much pomp of convention and pageantry of wealth, but nevertheless everything went off better than I expected.

Mrs. Hamilton must have had somewhere among her forebears people of culture and refinement. Leslie, as you know, is a very beautiful girl. I am afraid that her beauty was the lure which drew my son's heart to her while others of greater worth were passed by.

There were six bridesmaids and a maid of honor, with accompanying escorts for each as they walked back in the marriage train from the altar. I almost felt, dear Prissy, as I should probably feel if I were looking upon the dead face of my son, as I saw him take the ring from his friend, Mr. Sidney Carlton, and place it upon Leslie's finger.

There was a look upon his face that I had never seen before. Even to me, his mother, he had never given such a glance of utter adoration.

I cannot tell you the feeling that I had. Cold hands clasped my heart. Do all mothers feel this way? I think not.

There has always been such a great understanding between John and me and while, of course, I have not seen as much of him since he left his home to go to Albany, yet I have always tried to keep in touch with him by writing him letters of admonition and advice.

On the day of the wedding, however, when I looked at that beautiful girl beside him, I felt some way as though my boy had gone away from me. I knew that I had nothing in common with his wife and I suddenly felt that I had grown old and that never again would my boy listen to my counsel. She was of another time, almost of another race. Her gods were not my gods, and yet, Prissy, I must tell you of a great surprise I had.

The night before the wedding after they had had a rehearsal of the ceremony—this seemed to me almost a sacrilege—Leslie came to me and put his arms about me and laid her cheek against mine. It is soft and flower-like, Prissy. I felt a tug at my heart especially when she said: "Dear Mrs. Prescott, I shall never be able to thank you enough for giving me that beautiful desk. Already it has filled a place in my life that I never expected to have filled, already it has brought to me the knowledge that I am no different from all the women who have peopled this earth, because I know that all the women who have sat at that desk have loved as I love your son."

I did not tell her my dear Prissy, that probably the women of that romantic period of French history who had sat at that desk had not been women of charity and virtue. I did not want to sully her ideals.

Instead I asked her "Have you found the secret drawer?" and she answered with a smile, "The drawer is still a secret."

I am sorry to say that this answer dispelled any newfound joy that I had in my prospective daughter-in-law, for it told me that she would never come to me with her joys and her sorrows—that henceforth I should walk this world alone.

Affectionately yours,
MARY ALDEN PRESCOTT

SAUSAGE BISCUITS
By Bertha E. Shapleigh

Mix together two cups of flour, four teaspoons of baking powder, one-half teaspoon of salt and two table-spoons of lard or butter. Moisten with milk and knead to a soft dough.

Take onto a floured board, roll to the fourth thickness and cut into squares three inches long and three inches wide. On one-half of each square put a spoonful of sausage meat, fold over the other half, press the edges together and bake 20 minutes in a hot oven.

This is a Dutch recipe and is an excellent supper dish. It may be combined with a salad on wilted lettuce which is made by mixing bacon, finely chopped, the fat, vinegar, sugar, salt and pepper, and pouring it hot over the lettuce.

JUNKET CREAM WITH STRAWBERRIES
Heat one quart of fresh milk to a lukewarm temperature. Add one teaspoon of rennet or one junket tablet crushed and dissolved in one table-spoon of cold water. Let this set, as when making rennet custard.

Add one cup of sugar, one cup of heavy cream, one tablespoon of vanilla and a few grains of salt to the solid junket, and freeze.
Serve with one box of fresh strawberries crushed and sweetened to taste.

Next they delivered Tinkling's package at his house in the Blueberry Patch.

'BIGGEST' WET, DRY FIGHT IN U. S. IS COMING

World Court May Be Overshadowed When Congress Convenes Again

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright 1923 By Post Pub. Co.
Washington—The "wet" and "dry" fight since the Volstead law was passed is coming in the next congress. It may overshadow the world court in the debates as well as other issues. Anticipating such a development, President Harding will keep the status quo on American ships outside the three mile limit until congress gives permission to sell liquor on the high seas on a parity with foreign vessels. The "wets" will make it the test of the "dry" control of congress.

The president knows there is no law against the sale of liquor aboard American ships and to that extent Chairman Lasker and his legal advisers were right in selling liquors until a presidential order instructed them to do otherwise. Now that the Supreme court says congress must pass a law to prohibit the sale of liquor on American ships if it wishes that object accomplished, the president has had to consider carefully whether lifting the lid at this time would only create antagonism among the "drys" and imperil the appropriations for the shipping board next autumn.

Having failed to obtain a ship subsidy and believing now that aggressive operation of American vessels by the government itself is inevitable, Mr. Harding wants to make sure that the money for government operation will be forthcoming regularly to meet commitments already made and others that will have to be made to offset foreign competition on the seas. The president knows that the "drys" undoubtedly will tack a rider to the shipping appropriations providing that the money be granted only on condition that liquor is not sold on American ships.

This will be a challenge to the "wets" who already are preparing to show the country that the action of the "drys" is carrying things to the extreme. The merits of prohibition itself will hardly be discussed but instead the economic effects of congressional action, the need for greater appropriations and more drain on the tax payers' pocketbooks if American ships are kept "dry" while foreign vessels enjoy the freedom of the seas.

Frost Tonight, Weather Man Warns Public

Beware of frost!
This is the warning broadcast through the state Friday by the government weather bureau. The prediction for Friday night is lower temperature with possible frost.

Few have been wishing for cooler weather but there has been many an expression in favor of rain. Most of the planting is done in the country now and in city gardens as well. The ground is becoming dry and hard and the growth of grass is hampered. It is believed that a series of showers would stimulate growth generally.

EIGHT NEW STREET LIGHTS ORDERED

Additional Illumination Is Provided By Common Council

Dark corners of certain streets are to be made safer for travel and public safety by reason of the fact more light will be afforded through the recent order of the common council to install more street lights at street intersections. The lights and the candle-power ordered upon recommendation of the committee on streets and bridges are as follows:

North end of Garfield-st., 100 c. p.; intersection of Morrison and Levis-sts., 250 c. p.; intersection of Lemmings-st and Second-ave., 250 c. p.; Green Bay-st., 150 feet north of Belz boat house, 250 c. p.; intersection of Douglas and Lawrence-sts., 250 c. p.; intersection of Gilmore and Story-sts., 250 c. p.; La Fayette and Story-sts., 250 c. p.

The council also has ordered a change in the light at Story and Elsie-sts. from 100 c. p. to 250 c. p., and that at South River-st west of the bridge, from 100 c. p. to 250 c. p.

CLOSED SHOP ONLY. CARPENTERS RULE

Union carpenters will work for contractors only under a closed shop agreement hereafter, according to a unanimous vote by Carpenters Local No. 955 of Appleton at its meeting Wednesday evening in Trades and Labor council hall.

Union men previously raised no objection when nonunion workers were employed with them on the same job, but the union now will refuse to supply men unless all are members of the labor organization. This will affect only a few contractors, it is said. The others have agreed to the closed shop arrangement.

The carpenter union at its meeting arranged for a private dancing party May 10 at Trades and Labor hall.

If Your Loved Ones Are Buried In France, Then This Appeal Is For You

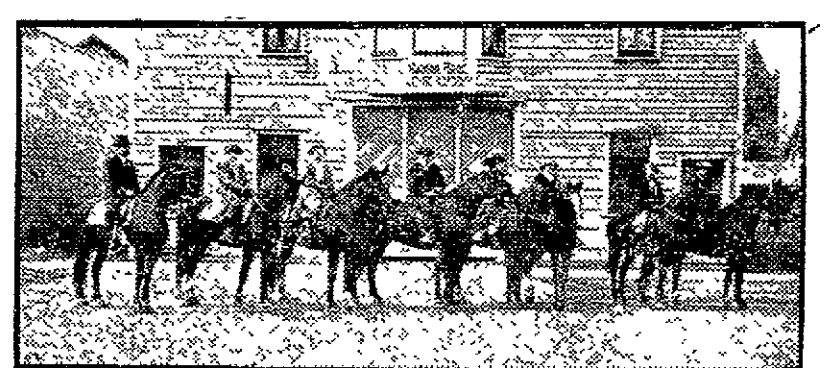

Appleton People Are Called Upon To Make Possible The Decoration Of Graves In France On All Future Memorial Days

Have you a husband, son, brother or relative buried in the cemeteries on French battlefields? If so, you would be glad of the privilege of sending flowers to decorate that grave on Memorial day as is done here at home.

Under a plan adopted by the American Legion, it will not be necessary for individuals to attend to this duty year after year, nor for the legion to ask funds annually. A Legion Graves Fund is being obtained here and all over the United States that will be big enough to take care of the decoration of graves for all time.

Therefore by paying an amount from $1 to perhaps $10 into the campaign which the Post-Crescent is conducting for the American Legion you can invest in this inspiring tribute to your hero dead and be secure in the knowledge that your loved ones are not forgotten when the nation sets aside a day to revere their memory.

Under the plan of Oney Johnston post of the American Legion, half of the quota of $200 set for Appleton goes to the national legion department for the foreign graves fund. The other half stays in Appleton to be used for the legion burial plot in Riverside and St. Joseph cemeteries. Appleton must pay at least the customary respect to the honored dead of the great war. Everyone should feel called upon to respond, especially

The Proper Care of Milk Bottles in the Home

Milk bottles are often times difficult to clean. If the housewife understood the amount of care and the expensive apparatus necessary to wash and sterilize milk bottles properly they would take a great deal more trouble to see that their own bottles are at least well rinsed before being left for the milk man.

In some cities there is an ordinance requiring that milk bottles be rinsed before they are returned to the milk plant. This is a wise provision, for unwashed milk bottles are an excellent breeding place for bacteria of all kinds and are difficult to wash and sterilize properly.

Some health ordinances prohibit the use of milk bottles for any purpose except that for which they were originally intended. This is a wise provision, for in addition to their being personal and costly equipment, milk bottles will retain odors from other foods, and these odors are often exceedingly difficult to get rid of.

As a general rule, the milk dealer will be very well satisfied, if the housewife will rinse her bottles in warm (not hot) water. Warm water is preferable to hot, as it is not so apt to coagulate the milk clinging to the glass.

Please rinse your milk bottles in lukewarm water, before setting them out, especially now as warm weather is approaching, it will greatly assist us in washing the bottles, our machine works mechanically but has no brains, therefore, it does not notice any bottles on which the milk may be dried, and give that bottle particular attention, it washes one just like the other, and if milk is dried on it is apt to slip thru without being noticed by the men handling and filling them, and then sour or contaminated milk is the consequence. Be sure not to use milk bottles for storing vinegar, syrup or kerosene, as there is a law prohibiting that. Yours for Clean Milk Bottles, Etc.

Buymanship

Miss Mary Sweeney, executive secretary of the Home Economics Association, says the country needs more "buymanship" and less salesmanship. A very neat way of defining the art and business of careful spending — don't you think so?

And we most certainly agree with her. At this Market, the aggressive brand of so-called salesmanship — the "sell-em-or-die-in-the-attempt" variety we hear so much about — is conspicuously absent.

Our interpretation of real salesmanship is to ASSIST THE CUSTOMER TO SELECT WHAT SHE WANTS.

We are determined to help our patrons, in selecting the kinds and particular cuts of Meat that they desire.

WANT AD TIPS
How To Coin A Want Ad Slogan
It is easy to see why slogans have become very popular with big advertisers, and why successful Want Ad users are turning to them. A slogan tells a great deal in few words. It is a condensed statement of facts the advertiser is very anxious for the reader to remember. Also, it is very easy to remember, being purposely made so.
A regular Want advertiser usually takes a step ahead when he coins a good slogan, and sticks to it.
The alternative is an effective type of slogan. Alliteration, a literary device, consists in placing words together which have the same beginning consonant or vowel sound. This arrangement falls very pleasantly on the ears. It is a great aid to memory.
Slogans of this type are easily created. One standard formula is to put together the advertiser's name, and the principal product he deals in, when they happen to begin with the same sound. As an example, a real estate man specialized in residential property. He didn't sell farms, or lots, or downtown property—he sold residences. His name was Harris. So he coined the slogan—"Harris For Homes."
A poultry breeder kept Rhode Island Reds. His name was Rankin. He adopted the slogan, "Rankin For Reds." Another poultry-keeper, who sought private customers for eggs, used the slogan, "Eggleston's Excellent Eggs."
One can have a clever slogan, of course, without using alliteration. He coined the slogan, "Loan You Half." This is a good model of the slogan which, in three or four words, pitifully states a feature of one's service, method, product, etc., which appeals strongly to the public. Other examples are, "Buy of Smith, and Save One-Third," "Zip Service," "The Self-It-Quick-Way."
When you have found a good slogan, use it regularly in your Want Ads. The longer you use it, the greater its worth to you.

THE PEOPLE'S AID

(The Post-Crescent herewith calls attention to the special service offered its readers through the People's Aid column. It desires to be of service in helping solve special problems vexing the public. Any matters pertaining to public service which are not satisfactory may be aired in this column.)

Public officials and persons in public life have consented to cooperate with this newspaper in answering all inquiries relating to public service, receive suggestions for the improvement thereof or to clear up any misunderstanding regarding the matter. From time to time Appleton residents have availed themselves of this service and have profited by it. The following communication was received Thursday and was referred to Secretary Hugh G. Corbett, Appleton Chamber of Commerce.

The People's Aid: A carnival company will show in Winnebago-co next week, just outside Appleton city limits. The city of Appleton does not permit carnivals within its city limits, yet they do just as much damage to the city by showing outside as they would do if they were in Appleton. Why doesn't the chamber of commerce take up this matter with the proper authorities either in the town of Menasha or Winnebago county in an effort to forbid carnivals from showing in their communities?—N. D.

Answer:
The chamber of commerce has been working on this matter for months and months and conducted a statewide survey on carnival regulations in Wisconsin communities. As to the carnivals showing outside city limits in Winnebago-co, we have taken up the matter with the officials of that county only to learn that the county has no authority in the matter. This opinion has also been confirmed by a local attorney, who says it is a matter for the town of Menasha to settle. I was not aware until just now that a carnival is to show near Appleton next week. I propose to see some of the town officials of Menasha on the matter at once.

Hugh G. Corbett, Secretary,
Chamber of Commerce.

'DETOUR PESTS' TO BE BIG PROBLEM TO BADGER MOTORISTS

Many Highways Are Already
Closed As Construction
Work Is Started

By Associated Press
Milwaukee—An epidemic of the motorists' pests "detours" are about to invade Wisconsin's highway systems, according to Friday's weekly report of the Milwaukee Journal's Tour department. For the past week construction crews have been busily engaged in establishing their camps on the hundreds of projects on Wisconsin's highway construction program for the coming season. Already some of the roads have been closed to traffic. Others will follow within the next week.

There are three detours on highway 17, between Milwaukee and Manitowish. Highway 57 is closed between Grafton and Saukville.

PROBLEM TO MADISON
Highway 74 will be practically useless on either side of Menominee Falls. Roads between Milwaukee and Madison will be a problem. Highway 41 is closed west of Waukesha, also east of Jefferson to Wales. Nineteen will be closed between Oconomowoc and Joliet and between Watertown and Hubberton and Waterloo and Marshfield.

No 107 will be closed in Lake Mills. No 12 will be closed on both sides of Whitewater.

Whitewater. The best combination to Madison from Milwaukee will be 19-59-41, county trunk E-26-41-12. Highway 61 will be closed between Darien and Clinton.

HERE'S GOOD DETOUR
Highway 55, between West Bend and Fond du Lac will be closed in two spots with a good detour over county Trunk V.
Highway 55 will be closed out of Peebles.
Highway 32, between Fond du Lac and Rosendale, will be closed.
Other highways to be closed include: 31, between Oakfield and Waupun, 35 from Waupun to Fox Lake, 91 between Oshkosh and Ripon, 37 between Green Bay and Greenleaf, 29 between Columbus and Lowell, also between Hustisford and Hartford, 25 between Watertown and Juneau, 10 between Janesville and Evansville, 36 between Burlington and Lyons and 12 between Genoa Junction and Geneva.

FOR THE FARMERSPRING SEEDING IS ALMOST DONE

Farmers Rush Work Through
To Make Up For Backward
Spring Season

Spring seeding received a good start last week and not a few farmers of Outagamie-co have already finished for this year. Both oats and barley are being planted copiously, most of the wheat and rye having been planted last fall.

Although some of the fields were not very dry at the time of the seeding, farmers felt that they could no longer delay the work which already had been held up so long by the unusually long winter. Spring seeding is about two weeks behind that of last year.

Winter rye came through in good shape and a normal harvest is looked for.
Planting of approximately 6,000 acres of sugar beets for the Green Bay Sugar company has started in Outagamie and Brown counties, and indications are that 1923 will bring a big sugar beet crop. Planting of peas has also started in the county.

Sports Fashions
Have a Jauntily Becoming Air
And Attractively Modest Pricings

Summer is the most informal season of the year. For the greater part of each day, one really looks fresher and more correctly clothed in sports attire than in any other costume. The gay colorings and simple lines of sports apparel are always becoming. THE IMPORTANT THING—is that sport clothing is very modestly priced.

The New Jacquet
Combines With a Skirt for a Very Inexpensive Outfit

The jacquet is a most versatile garment. Fifth Avenue has combined the jacquet with a pleated skirt to make a very smart costume — which will be the height of fashion on College Avenue. These jacquets supply desirable color notes, and are the coolest and most practical of garments.

Knitted jacquets are shown in patterns of jade with white, black with white, and tan with buff. $22.50.

Aeroplane cloth jacquets are embroidered in white, and all-over design. In French rose, corn, and old blue with white embroidery; and in white with black embroidery. $15.

Canton crepe jacquets come in white with black or rose embroidery. The collar and reverses are faced with plain colors. $27.

Linon jacquets are trimmed with an all-over pattern of soutache braid, in blue or white with white braiding. $22.50.

White wool jersey jacquets are embroidered in beige. $22.50.

Jacquets of heavy basket weave sport silk come in orchid or white. $35.

White Skirts are Pleated

And Picture Many Gay
Warm Days

White has captured the imagination of fashion designers this season. So many summer clothes will be white. A very attractive, and much favored, costume comprises a pleated white skirt with a new jacquet, or possibly a bright sweater.

These skirts are French pleated — in fine knife pleats. The ones mentioned below are all white, and conform to the latest New York displays. In fact, they arrived only this week.

White serge skirts come in French serge or a slightly coarser weave—$3.50 and $12.75.

White wool Canton crepe makes attractive skirts at $10.

White silk spiral crepe is used in pleated skirts at $14.

Are You Riding This Spring?---

Everybody is riding this spring. Riding is so vigorous a sport that one feels justified in wearing these smart riding breeches. These breeches differ from knickers in that they are tight at the knee. These were selected because of extra tailoring.

Knicker riding breeches are reminiscent of wartime days—and very practical. $3.75.

Tweed riding breeches have quite an English air, and attractive weaves. $6.75.

Carduery riding breeches combine extreme durability with a trim appearance. $8.75.

Knickers Continue "Smart"

Knickers are being "done" quite as much this year as last. For the hiker, for the long auto trip when one alights from the car to ramble, for camping trips, knickers are correct.

These mannish knickers are exceptionally well tailored. Khaki knickers are $2.95; tweed knickers are $3.95.

Cool Weaves and Colors
in Summer Fabrics

Exquisite materials make home-dressmaking and your own designing a delightful task. The woman who has never attempted to sew before, will evolve Parisian results by using the Deltor. New fabrics appear in the yard goods section each day. Unusually large color ranges are in inviting note.

"Alltyme Crepe"
In Many New Shades
$2.19 a yard

Our new color range includes fallow, sandalwood, cocoa, nephos, flowered, elder, Capri, pelican, white, navy and black. 36 inches wide and $2.19 a yard. Insist on genuine "Alltyme" crepe.
